Press Club Head Plans No Changes

Windsor P. Booth, who will take office Jan. 29 as president of the National Press Club, said yesterday he plans no changes in club policies.

Booth, chief of the National Geographic Society's news service, was a leader in the movements to desegregate the club's membership and to permit women reporters to cover speakers at club luncheons on the same basis as men.

He defeated Ralph de Toledano of King Features, 464 to 121 votes, for a one-year term.

Booth, 53, is a former White House correspondent for Time and Life. He was a reporter for The Washington Post, the Boston Post, the Springfield Republican and the Springfield News.
